FOR PRESIDENT,
HENRY CLAY,
OF KENTUCKY.

City Nominations.
FOR REPRESENTATIVES,
George W. Holden,
William Paine.
Election on Saturday, Oct. 14th.

Representative Election.

Let every Whig in the city be reminded that the fourth trial to elect Representatives will take place to-morrow at ten o'clock, and let each Whig consider it his duty to attend the polls and cast his ballot for the Whig candidates. It is done the business will be finished acceptably. The candidates are worthy such support, and it will be honorable to Whigs to come out in their full strength and give the "long pull, the strong pull and the pull altogether."

A few Thoughts upon Social Duties.

It is quite as true in morals as in philosophy that an ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure. It would be well then we think to apply this rule in our social intercourse. There are in this city, engaged in the various mechanical pursuits, in mercantile affairs and the various callings of life many young men, most of them came here strangers, they pursue with diligence their business in business hours and in their hours of relaxation and leisure are left alone or to seek out, by chance hits, acquaintances among those similarly situated whom accident may throw in their way. A few devote themselves to a methodical course of reading—others have not acquired the habit and have no one to encourage them in it. But all have social natures desiring companionship and intercourse with others.

We have here, for all such, in the winter, the meetings of the Lyceum once a week where all may, at a small cost, listen to interesting lectures. We have too the meetings of the Mechanic Association where are lectures and other interesting exercises. But these although useful and pleasant, still, like the companionship of books do not fully satisfy the social feelings of our nature. For this how little provision is made and upon it how little thought is bestowed by those who possess the ability to afford the means of its gratification. What wonder, under such circumstances that our young men run into errors, and bad habits, and frequent bowling alleys and drink wine?

The door of temptation is left wide open and the wonder is that greater mischief does not ensue and a wider spread moral desolation appear. If men of families—if young men having parents and friends here—if there is not more general attention to the duties of social intercourse among our citizens, then it is plain, if we would protect the morals of our youth, that some public popular institutions should be established and supported to accomplish, feebly, what may better be done by private enterprise, but which neglect demands public action.

There might and there should be social clubs formed for reading and declamation—others for debates—others for writing literary compositions and each reading his production to the society—others for the cultivation of music—others for drawing, painting &c. These several societies might meet once a week—their numbers being few they could easily meet in a private dwelling, could be devoted to pleasant conversation and to social enjoyment.

This is a rough sketch—a mere hint of what may be done to improve the social state of our young people, and to protect them from the lures of temptation to an evil and vicious course. Every good man rejoices when one is reclaimed from a vicious life but it ought to be considered equally important and equally worthy effort to prevent evil and to make the path of virtue pleasant and sure, from which none can stray without making a great effort.

There may be those who think this a small matter for newspaper remark, but we confess, that from what we see and hear and know, nothing appears to us more worthy the space we have occupied or of a share in the thoughts of our citizens.

The man of the Belfast Signal is waking up. That joke of ours has fairly hit him under the fifth rib. The idea of removing Castine and Belfast into our city, to increase our size, enlarge our business and add to our respectability, the Signal did not seem to relish, and he thinks there is no necessity for the enlargement of Bangor, for, he says "there are whole blocks of buildings in that far famed city lying idle, monuments of their former folly." Now don't be so cruel, neighbor. Those blocks of stores lying idle are not in this city but in your fruitful imagination. Just come up here and we will show you round a little and let you see how the houses, and stores, and shops, and barns are being erected, and where we have already located Castine and—no matter, Belfast refuses to come, and we must get along without her—for the present!

The Signal asks how many inhabitants the great city of Bangor contains, reckoning rats and all? We were not before aware that rats were reckoned inhabitants anywhere—certainly they never have been in this city—and we are inclined think no where else, excepting Belfast.

During a thunder storm at New Orleans on the 24th ult., a lamp post, corner of Custom-house and Basin streets, was struck by lightning, and shattered into fragments, some of the fragments were thrown twenty feet

The battalion of artillery, composed of the Brewer and Bangor artillery companies, under the command of Col Kimball, paraded yesterday at Brewer, and were joined in the afternoon by Capt Moulton's company of City Greys, as a volunteer escort, when the whole marched into the city and made a fine display. The Brewer Artillery company is provided with new field pieces of large size, and elegantly mounted in the modern style.

The artillery were out in good numbers and made a fine appearance, and performed their movements in a very credible manner—much better than they have an opportunity to do when mustering, as is usual, with the Regiment of Infantry. The City Greys attracted much attention for their elegant appearance and their soldier like bearing. Their precision in the manual exercise is worthy of the highest commendation.

We are gratified to find so good a feeling existing in our city, in favor of supporting our military establishment, and upon an economical and temperance basis. Indeed, if we can raise money enough to buy a uniform, we begin to think we shall "june."

The Washington correspondent of the New York True Sun, states that John Tyler has at length been persuaded to make a virtue of his forlorn and disgraced condition, and patriotically declines being a candidate for the Presidency.

The speculations of this correspondent, regarding the anticipated moves on the political chess board, are amusing, and for the amusement rather than the instruction of our readers, we give a synopsis of his predictions, if so they may be called.

He thinks that through the instrumentality of Mr Webster's influence, it is arranged that every effort shall be made to head off Mr Clay from being the Whig candidate for the Presidency, that Judge McLean, supported by Mr Wickliffe, is to take the field in the West, that Mr Webster is to start in New England on his own hook, some of the Tyler and other papers to nominate him, that Mr Upshur is to do up the South, while Tyler, Henshaw, Porter, and Spencer, are to support every body by turns and nobody—pulling plasters on to all weak places, and thus pave the way for the election of Judge McLean as an independent candidate, who shall re-adjust the political scales.

This speculation all goes for nothing, in practice, at any rate, since Mr Clay has been in effect nominated by the acclamation of the whigs and the whig press, and the National Convention have only to ratify, in form, what is already morally accomplished, and to select, with prudence, a suitable and trust-worthy candidate for the Vice Presidency.

The New York Tribune states that Mr Bartlett recently read a paper before the Historical Society, in which he stated among other things that French architects and artists under the French Embassy to Persia were making great discoveries amid the ruins of Ninevah, Babylon, Ecbatana, Persepolis, Ctesiphon, &c who, with others, had deciphered the arrow headed inscriptions of those cities.

The English are busy in Asia Minor, especially in Ancient Lycia, where Mr Fellows seems to be making extraordinary discoveries. He has found three different grades of architecture—the ancient rude form—next, if we mistake not, something resembling the Egyptian, and last the finished Greek Architecture. They are unearthed beautiful statues and fragments of sculpture, equal, it seems, to those of Rome. The English Government has despatched a steamer to bring home these valuable discoveries, with a hundred men to be under Mr Fellows's order, in making farther excavations. If all this be true, England may yet show galleries with Rome. He also spoke of Abyssinia, which is every day becoming a country of deeper interest to the antiquarian. An English antiquarian has recently published a work on the Etruscan language, in which he attempts to prove that he has finally unraveled its long impenetrable mystery, and found that it is nothing but Old Irish. It may be that Pat speaks Etruscan—but if travelers in Etruria read aright, he must use some Greek letters, it not sounds, to do it.

The Albany mechanics are fast getting their names up for ingenuity and good workmanship. Not long since one of their number invented a new mode of constructing riding saddles, one of the greatest improvements in that business that has been made for a century and by which a man is enabled to sit comfortably upon a horse instead of standing in stirrups as though straddling a log.

More recently it is announced that another of their number Mr William Richardson has invented an improvement on the common umbrella. The ribs on which the cloth is extended are so jointed as to fold up, and a part of the handle can be detached so that the largest sized umbrella can be packed in a valise.

We learn from the Norfolk Beacon of Thursday last, that the schooner Leah Parker, Topping, of Hampton, was capsized in Hampton Roads on the Tuesday previous, by a sudden flaw of wind. Capt James Henderson, of the steamer Star, being near the spot, rendered prompt assistance, rescuing the crew from a watery grave. The schooner was towed into Hampton harbor by the Star.

The Bath Inquirer says there was launched in that town the fine copper fastened bark Baring & Brothers, 292 tons burthen—to be commanded by Capt John Cooker.

Also the superior bark Nautilus of about 340 tons burthen, intended for the freighting business.

Whig majority in 54 Counties, 3,764, Do in 1841, 1,821, clear Whig gain, 3,764.

There remain 39 Counties to be heard from, these gave in 1841, 6,007 Loco Foco majority, in these Counties, therefore, the Whigs have to gain 2,243 to elect the Governor.

The Globe concedes that if Crawford runs as well in the remaining counties as in those which have been heard from, he is elected by about 700 majority, and at the same time that Cooper, the Loco Foco candidate, has been sustained by the full strength of his party. This is in fact an admission that Georgia is a Whig State. That she is such we have no doubt and her vote in 1844 may be set down a Whig Tariff and for HENRY CLAY.

Court Courier.

On Tuesday, William Dwyer was put on trial for an assault and battery committed upon the body of a Scotchman near the city Hall, on Tuesday evening last. The jury rendered a verdict of guilty. A G Jewett for prisoner.

Charles Camp, was next tried for a violation of the license laws, in keeping a victualing establishment and selling spirituous liquors without a license. Hathaway for prisoner—verdict guilty.

George A Stilkey, Levi Stevens, Wm Dougherty, and Patrick Hurin, were next placed at the bar on a charge of being concerned with "divers other evil disposed persons," in a "riotous and riotous" attempt to rescue a horse from one Einmons Warren, which he was in progress of leading to pound, in which attempt an assault was committed upon him, the said Warren, "to the great terror of the people and against the peace and dignity of the State." The prisoners were ingeniously and eloquently defended by Jacob McGaw, Allen Haines, Theodore S Brown, and John Appleton, Esqs. The trial occupied the principal part of the day on Wednesday, and a verdict was returned yesterday morning of guilty as to Stilkey and Doughty and not guilty as to the others.

Francis Wardell was next tried for keeping an inn, the Columbia House, in this city, without a license,—verdict guilty. C C Cushman for prisoner.

Yesterday morning Laury Cole, of Cornma, a young man about 20 years of age, was put on trial charged with a felonious assault upon Mary Ann Williams, of that town, with intent to commit a rape. The girl, only 12 years of age, was introduced as witness, and testified to a most brutal assault made upon her by the prisoner. Her testimony was confirmed by evidence of his confessions made soon after. The jury, after an absence of only about one minute, returned a verdict of guilty. J Appleton & Knowls for prisoner.

James K Weatherbee, indicted for stealing a horse from Mr Norcross, keeper of the Washington House, was next tried and acquitted. A G Jewett for prisoner.

James K Leonard, for larceny, was also tried and acquitted. C C Cushman for prisoner.

Accident.

We learn that a young man named Samuel H Dickinson, of this city, yesterday, while passing down Cedar street, and when near a miserable and disgraceful, though abandoned bridge, his attention was called to some object at a distance, when by a mis-step he fell through the bridge, where he found himself unable to rise. His cries attracted attention, and he was taken up and conveyed home. He was unable last evening to turn himself in bed on account of injury to his back, although it is hoped that it is only an injury of the muscles.

There was a boy killed at this bridge a year ago last winter by sliding down the hill and falling through. It seems as though some persons, if not the city, should fence it out.

Father Mathew the apostle of Temperance in a recent address in England, on some allusion having been made to the Press, took occasion to say that next to God, to the support he had met with from the most mighty moral power on this earth, the public press, did he attribute the success which had attended the great moral movement, "total abstinence." In Ireland, with one solitary exception, the whole press had been in his favor, and in London they all knew the powerful support he had received by the public press of all shade of opinion, and he thus publicly tendered his grateful thanks to those who had the control of every metropolitan daily journal.

Capt James Ross, it is currently reported, is not long to enjoy his ease at home, but is shortly to proceed on another Government expedition to attempt a Northwest Passage, or at least a North Polar Survey.

The "Charleston Mercury" heartily endorses the following sentiment of the Petersburg (Va) Republican—

"We can assure him (the Richmond Enquirer) that the State Right Party have not the most remote intention of submitting to the decrees of the Syracuse Convention. [Repub]

"No, indeed," exclaims the Charleston Mercury, "nor to the decrees of fifty of them. Does any one suppose," continues the Mercury, that "they ever expected us to take the word of command from them. A body constituted in palpable defiance of the fundamental principles of the party and of common sense, suppose that, by big talk and formidable parade, they can thrust their high behests upon the freemen of this country, as their rule of political action?" Did they imagine that the piece of bold humbuggery, they had given to the world, as the "unanimous voice of the great State of New York," would ever pass for more than it was, the slavish echo of some cunning party Jupiter, thundering from behind a cloud? If they did, then one of two things will prove true, either that is applicable to the great Democratic party, which Bieleau says of the World; "that it is so full of fools, the only way for a man, who would avoid seeing one, is to shut himself up alone and break his looking glass"—or the Regency will find that bring this dangerous battery into the ranks of their friends they have not only forfeited all claims to amicable alliance, but ignited a magazine, that if it does not blow up the party, will pretty surely blow them to a distance too high heaven to leave a hope of their getting foothold on this earth again.

The Whig Party Tested as if by Fire.

The fiery furnace of trial through which Mr Tyler has been leading the Whig party, has been a test of its soundness and purity that but few parties have ever stood or could stand. It is true that now and then longo intervallo, a Whig has succumbed to the power of patronage, and that here and there, a man has been bought and paid for,—but the victims of corruption have been few indeed, as compared with the number of the party, and the brilliancy of the temptation, and the detection of these few has not had the least influence upon the organization of the whole party, or upon its efficiency for action in future campaigns. The moment office made a man "a Tyler man," that moment he was powerless with his former friends,—while every day, we see Whigs made sacrifices, because they will not become "Tyler men," preferring to give up place to principles. Indeed, hundreds of them are thus sacrificed weekly,—for now that the cities are reformed the Tyler brood is dusting and sweeping in all directions in the country. Ten penny postmasters as well as ten thousand dollar ones are going. The Whig camp has now in fact become pretty well swept. There are but few Whigs left there. The relics are chiefly Tyler men democratized, as the new process is called, that is men traitorous to their own principles, to be more traitorous to Mr Tyler as soon as they dare to be.

Into this fiery furnace out of which the Whig party has come unscathed, Mr Tyler is now plunging the so-called Democratic party. The Washington Globe, knowing the materials of which its party is composed, and shrewder than many of its party contemporaries, bitterly inveighs against Democrats accepting office under Mr Tyler. The Globe well knows, what we are all daily seeing, that an office holder under Mr Tyler ceases to be a Van Buren man, that is, he separates himself from what the Globe believes to be the future destiny of his party, and the Globe well knows, too, that when he accepts office, the temptation of office will be too great for him ever to be gathered back into the Van Buren fold. Hence the bitter imprecations of the Globe upon Tylerism, and upon Tyler men, and upon Mr Tyler himself, and the Tyler Cabinet about him,—for what Tylerism was in vain attempting to do with the Whig party, that is, disorganize it, the Globe foresees Mr Tyler will accomplish, and is indeed accomplishing in theirs through the patronage of the Government.

Now it is the highest honor of the Whig party—it is the clearest demonstration of its virtue, and of the value of its principles, that it has thus withstood temptation. After a struggle of twelve long years for the helm of the Government, it succeeded in obtaining it, but on the threshold of success, deprived of its chosen helmsman and hiding the ship of state in new and dangerous hands, it preferred to abandon it, and all the honors and patronage that accompany it, rather than be compromised in its principles or its honor. Powerless with honor, was better, they reasoned, than dishonorable power. Principles are worth more than places. And what is remarkable, too, that though thus in the arms of victory stripped of all its fruits, Whigs are not in the least discouraged, and were seldom readier or fresher for future action. They reason now, and they reason well, that the exertions which brought them victory once will bring them victory again. It is easier, they truly say, to elect a President in 1844 against disordered and contending factions, than it was to succeed in 1841 against the most powerful and vigorously combined body of placemen that the world ever saw.

We shall continue to watch with a good deal of interest the manner in which the so called Democratic Party stand the test of the fiery furnace Mr Tyler has prepared for them. We have but little doubt that they will melt away in it, and we shall look upon the process of liquefaction with the liveliest interest, that it has been tried in vain upon our Party. It affords us too, great satisfaction to see, that the revolution in Mr Tyler's political associates, which was the cause of so much joy to the Globe, is now the cause of such a grievous pain. His struggles to get rid of the Tyler embrace is the more amusing to us who saw the earnestness for the embrace Courtied, flattered and deluded, as never mistress was, Mr Tyler was won. The union is not so sweet as was expected, now that the kissing of the honeymoon is over. The Globe struggles for a divorce, an entire, complete divorce, not a mens et thoro alone, but e vinculo matrimonii, from the matrimonial bond. Mr Tyler won't go. He is bent upon staying to make mischief in the family. We wish him all possible success.—[N Y Express]

FOR THE GROWTH, PRESERVATION AND RESTO-RATION OF THE HAIR.

No matter how bald a person may be a growth of hair will be produced, and as naturally, too as the herbage grows on the plain, or the lily in the valley. This tonic is warranted to cleanse the hair from Dandruff, and every other accumulating substance. Is your hair dry and falling off?—the tonic will moisten and fix it strongly in the head. Is your hair thin or your head bald?—the tonic is warranted to satisfy the largest desires in thickening the hair. Wash the Hair

It is composed of those remedial agents that restore the skin at once to a sound and healthy condition when thus restored, you will soon discover on the head a short, soft, and beautiful growth of young hair gradually increasing in length till it comes as your other hair was before you began to lose it

*The question is often asked, from what is the word Cyprus derived? Answer—From the word Cyprus, the name of a beautiful island in the Mediterranean sea. The inhabitants of that far famed island are as well known for their fine glossy hair, as for their bright sparkling eyes. It is known, however, that many other people, except those of Cyprus, have never used the Lonicerol until its introduction into the United States.
